A LARGE number of the people of Wheeling—all who know the man—were pained yesterday to hear of the death of Major Richard Savage, a biographical sketch of whom appears in our local columns this morning. He was a most estimable citizen, highly esteemed by a large circle of friends and acquaintances, and his death is deeply deplored. The sad event cast a gloom over many hearts. The Major was the model of a genial and kind hearted gentleman, and his place of business on Market street was well known for its pleasant social life. His stricken family have the sympathy of his many warmly attached friends.
